

Press release

WALLSTREETTHEATRE

presents

“Simply british“

The perfect balance between comedy and artistic

In “Magic Chairs” Mr. Schultze and Mr. Schroeder demonstrate their joy in crafted comedy and daring artistic highlights.

The two dear old friends step onto stage, quite the English gentlemen: perfectly dressed in a suit, horn-rimmed spectacles, sock suspenders and slicked down hair. Right from the first moment they are no longer a match for what follows.

WallStreetTheatre combines outlandish comedy and bizarre characters with a pinch of the artistic to create a witty show with its own individual style.

The public is drawn in most charmingly through their bubbling improvisation and cryptic humour.

Christian Kloempken und Andreas Wiegels founded WallStreetTheatre 1993, after they completed their training at Bristol based Circomedia, centre for circus with physical theatre. Since then they achieved international success and are winner of various awards.

Directed by Detlef Winterberg.

More Info at www.wallstreettheatre.com